RON LIEPERT

After many years behind the scenes, Ron Liepert has emerged as the front-man — winning the Progressive Conservative seat in Calgary West.

"I've been involved politically dating back to the Lougheed days, managing provincial and federal campaigns, so now I'm putting my name out front," Liepert said last night, conceding it was a bit of a twist to be the candidate when he is accustomed to being a manager. "It's very difficult when you're the candidate not to manage your own campaign."

Liepert, in a riding where constituents want better roads and new schools, said he'll push for a balance between enjoying this province's riches and being fiscally responsible.

"I want the 'Building Alberta's Future' to be more than just a slogan," he said.

"I really think we're in a position where we can do things other provinces can only think of doing but I want to make sure Albertans know that doesn't mean we go on a spending spree."

Former Calgary West MLA Karen Kryczka stepped down for this round, opening the doors for Liepert and fellow-candidates on the ballot, which included Green Party member James Kohut, Derek Smith of the Liberal Party, NDPer Chantelle Dubois and Alliance candidate John Keyes.

Liepert has long been involved in campaign planning, strategy, communications and management for a wide variety of candidates.
